REALTOR® RESILIENCY REPORT

This communication from NAR to all Members describes the many ways NAR is working to guide and support REALTORS® and the real estate industry during the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic. Every week, you’ll find up-to-date, relevant information on how to ensure your health and safety, the virus’ impact on the economy and your business, its impact on NAR activities, and what NAR is doing to help.

Executive Summary

- NAR’s latest Economic Pulse Flash Survey finds that more than 3 in 4 REALTORS® currently working with sellers this week—76%—reported their clients haven’t reduced listing prices to attract buyers, according to a new survey from NAR. That’s up from 74% who said the same a week ago. The survey also concludes that 3 in 10 REALTORS® said they were able to complete nearly all aspects of real estate transactions while complying with social distancing. See the survey for more results.

- NAR also today released its 2020 REALTORS® and Sustainability Report. It finds that 7 in 10 REALTORS® said energy efficiency promotion in listings was very or somewhat valuable, and a majority of REALTORS®—61%—found clients were at least somewhat interested in sustainability. See the report for more results.

- NAR also released its Pending Home Sales Index (PHSI), showing that pending home sales fell in March, seeing expected declines as a result of the coronavirus outbreak. The PHSI decreased 20.8% to 88.2 in March. Year-over-year, contract signings declined 16.3%. An index of 100 is equal to the level of contract activity in 2001.

- As Congressional leadership debate future economic relief legislation, NAR continues to advocate for priorities for REALTORS® in the bill, including future funding and small-business assistance, tax and regulatory changes, and new technology like remote online notarization (RON). The Senate is scheduled to be in session next week, while the House is scheduled to return to session May 12.

- NAR is one of the leading industry voices in support of a bill allowing for RON. Many states have already acted on this front, but the nation needs a uniform federal standard. Using RON would allow Americans to complete loan transactions without jeopardizing their health. A recent CNBC article showed the average American can save $277 a month with a refinancing.

1. Ensuring your health and safety
NAR continues to closely monitor this evolving public health crisis, and is providing updates and guidance from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and others as quickly as possible.

The CDC recently released a new fact sheet; please share it with you members and colleagues. It provides life-saving information in six areas:

1) Know about COVID-19;
2) Know how COVID-19 is spread;
3) Protect yourself and others from COVID-19;
4) Practice social distancing;
5) Prevent the spread of COVID-19 if you are sick, and
6) Know your risk for severe illness.

To view and access the new CDC fact sheet, please click [link]. For more details from the CDC on the use of cloth face coverings to help slow the spread of COVID-19, please go [link]. For the latest information on all matters COVID-19, please go to the CDC’s website, [cdc.gov/coronavirus].

REALTORS® also have a special responsibility to take all necessary health and safety precautions, including those ordered by your state or locality, whichever are more strict.

Even if real estate is deemed essential in your area, we strongly encourage you to use virtual showings and limit in-person activity in all other aspects of the real estate transaction to get us through this crisis. For a list of states that have implemented stay-at-home orders, please visit [link].

NAR has also released “Coronavirus: A Guide for REALTORS®” online to provide guidance to members on some common transactional issues due to COVID-19, including open house guidance. The guide is updated frequently, please find it [link].

2. Impact on the economy and members’ businesses

Majority of REALTORS® Continue to Report Sellers Haven’t Lowered Listing Prices to Attract Buyers
More than three in four REALTORS® currently working with sellers this week—76%—reported their clients haven’t reduced listing prices to attract buyers, according to a new survey from NAR (see chart below). That’s up from 74% who said the same a week ago.
“Nearly 70% of Americans have secure employment and those interested in purchasing homes are looking at the enticing mortgage rates,” said NAR Chief Economist Lawrence Yun. “One in five potential buyers have dropped out of the market due to job loss concerns; hopes are the massive financial stimulus package can help replace a good portion of lost income until the economy steadily reopens. More home sellers are needed to relieve the acute inventory shortage.”
NAR’s latest Economic Pulse Flash Survey—conducted April 26-27—asked members how the coronavirus outbreak has impacted the residential and commercial real estate markets. Highlights include:

- Three in 10 REALTORS® said they were able to complete nearly all aspects of real estate transactions while complying with social distance directives.
- A majority of REALTORS®—64%—reported buyers are looking for some discounts in home prices.

NAR also today released its 2020 REALTORS® and Sustainability Report, which surveyed REALTORS® about sustainability issues facing the real estate industry. Highlights include:

- Seven in 10 REALTORS® said energy efficiency promotion in listings was very or somewhat valuable.
- A majority of REALTORS®—61%—found clients were at least somewhat interested in sustainability.
- Forty-one percent of homes with green certifications spent neither more nor less time on the market.
- The home features clients listed as very important to their agent or broker included a comfortable living space; proximity to frequently visited places; and windows, doors, and siding.

“As many families are currently spending more time at home, some are taking on improvement projects involving sustainable features,” said Jessica Lautz, NAR vice president of demographics and behavioral insights. “Some buyers are also deciding to purchase homes with environmentally friendly components. In both instances, these households look to either reduce utility costs or increase personal comfort within their home.”

NAR Calls Housing Market Slump Temporary as Pending Home Sales Fall in March

Pending home sales fell in March, seeing expected declines as a result of the coronavirus outbreak, according to NAR. Each of the four major regions saw drops in month-over-month contract activity and year-over-year pending home sales transactions.

The Pending Home Sales Index (PHSI) a forward-looking indicator based on contract signings, decreased 20.8% to 88.2 in March. Year-over-year, contract signings declined 16.3%. An index of 100 is equal to the level of contract activity in 2001. For more detail, see the accompanying news release here.

“The housing market is temporarily grappling with the coronavirus-induced shutdown, which pulled down new listings and new contracts,” said Lawrence Yun, NAR’s chief economist. “As consumers become more accustomed to social distancing protocols, and with the economy slowly and safely reopening, listings and buying activity will resume, especially given the record low mortgage rates.”

“The usual Spring buying season will be missed, however, so a bounce-back later in the year will be insufficient to make up for the loss of sales in the second quarter,” he said. “Overall, home sales are projected to have declined 14% for the year.”

Citing results from NAR’s April 19-20 Flash Survey, Yun says technology tools such as virtual tours and e-signings are helping connect buyers and sellers. Fifty-eight percent of REALTORS® reported that buyers are using virtual tours, and 43% said buyers have taken advantage of e-closings.

“Although the pandemic continues to be a major disruption in regards to the timing of home sales, home prices have been holding up well,” Yun said. “In fact, due to the ongoing housing shortage, home prices are likely to squeeze out a gain in 2020 to a new record high. I project the national median home price to increase 1.3% for the year, though there will be local market variations and the upper-end market will likely experience a reduction in home price.”

Legislative Update: NAR Continues to Advocate for Relief for REALTORS® as Congress Debates Further Economic Stimulus Legislation

As U.S. Senate and House leadership negotiate a “phase four” COVID-19 economic relief package, NAR continues to work alongside Congress to help secure priorities for REALTORS® in the upcoming bill, including future funding and small-business assistance, tax and regulatory changes, and new technology like remote online notarization (RON).

NAR’s Advocacy team will continue to fight for small businesses, the self-employed, and independent contractors. Specifically, we remain to be one of the leading voices in support of a bill allowing for RON.

Many states have already acted on this front, but the nation needs a uniform federal solution. RON laws allow a notary and signor in different physical locations to safely and securely execute electronic documents using two-way audiovisual communication.

Given this time of crisis and uncertainty, Congress has the opportunity to immediately allow loan transactions to be completed using RON, allowing Americans to complete loan transactions without having to jeopardize their health by gathering at a closing table. Every loan closed puts money directly in Americans’ pockets—a recent CNBC article showed that the average American can save $277 a month with a refinancing.

In addition, last week NAR wrote the FHA in response to comments that it was considering raising premiums on FHA borrowers.

“FHA’s capital resources...have grown to $58 billion in FY 2019,” NAR’s letter states. “These funds will play an invaluable role in keeping FHA operating at no expense to the taxpayer...NAR urges FHA to maintain the current premium levels...when [American families] are facing the most far-reaching health crisis in many generations.”

In the letter, NAR acknowledges its concerns that access to mortgage credit could become “severely restricted” should FHA premiums increase, which “could potentially damage the Mutual Mortgage Insurance Fund more so than simply riding out the brief period of turmoil we see this spring.”

The U.S. Senate is scheduled to be in session next week. The House of Representatives is scheduled to return to session May 12.

REALTOR® Party News: “Protect Your Investment” Brochure Available for Members to Offer Help to Homeowners
The REALTOR® Party has released a new resource for members to help homeowners who are struggling to meet their loan obligations. The response you receive will send you to visit nar.realtor/coronavirus for the latest information.
Final Thoughts from Vince and Bob
REALTORS® have always been community leaders. The COVID-19 pandemic has brought hardship and heartache to many—but we have also been gratified to see so many stories of REALTORS® showing leadership by helping their fellow agents, their customers and clients, and their communities. A recent REALTOR® Magazine article highlighted some of these REALTORS® heroes.

One REALTOR® from New York has brought his team of more than 100 agents and 20 staff together using FaceTime and other videoconferencing platforms. To facilitate better engagement, the company put together a guide for working from home that includes not only best practices, but also information about mental health, motivation, and creating a routine.

Another REALTOR® from North Carolina partnered with other real estate pros in her area to support local businesses while at the same time giving back to teachers. They’re asking folks to contribute donations to go toward the purchase of gift cards for local retailers, and they’ll donate those gift cards to area teachers.

These stories and more remind us of the thousands of acts of kindness that happen every day across America. When we fall, we help each other up—and REALTORS® are among the first to reach out their hands. As trying as these times have been, we are also honored to be part of an industry as compassionate and as generous as the REALTOR® family. And we are honored to work in support of you, your family, your business, and your future.

Be well and stay safe,

Vince Malta
